OVERVIEW

Adam Cooper is an associate in the Dallas office, where he is a member of the health care and FDA practice group. Adam's practice focuses on a variety of health law issues, including health care regulatory, compliance, and transactional issues for hospitals, health systems, and other ancillary health care providers such as durable medical equipment suppliers, pharmacies, home health and hospice agencies, laboratories, diagnostic testing facilities, skilled nursing facilities, and long term care facilities. His scope of work includes analysis of potential Stark Law and Anti-Kickback matters; government investigation and inquiries; federal regulatory compliance, including Stark and Anti-Kickback statutes, EMTALA, HIPAA, and the Affordable Care Act; and assisting clients with various operational matters, including contracting and risk management issues.

PROFESSIONAL BACKGROUND

Prior to joining the firm, Adam was a summer associate for the firm's Dallas office and an Oklahoma-based law firm in 2016. In addition, he was a judicial extern for the Honorable Judge Robert Bell of the Oklahoma Court of Civil Appeals, and he was a judicial extern for the Honorable Judge Timothy DeGiusti of the U.S. District Court of the Western District of Oklahoma.
