

Clean Technology & Alternative Energy Group

Innovative energy companies, investors and emerging businesses turn to K&L Gates with their most important opportunities and challenges in the alternative energy industry.

Our Clean Technology & Alternative Energy Group has both the experience and in-depth understanding of energy law, policy and business to help you succeed. Our practice encompasses such diverse energy sources as hydrogen, solar, wind-power, ethanol, biodiesel and biogas to diesel, coal gasification, alternative hydropower and various "Green Tech" technologies employed in industry to facilitate the production of clean energy.

We know the clean energy marketplace and regulatory environment. We have helped develop, finance, site, permit and evaluate renewable energy projects for clients across the nation and internationally. We help emerging companies form and organize, secure funding, establish strategic alliances, commercialize their products through technology licensing and protect their intellectual property. Our Washington, D.C. team members actively keep our clients at the forefront of this expanding segment of the energy industry, navigating the related policy and regulatory issues. Our attorneys also maintain relationships with venture capital firms, investment banks and other investors that provide emerging alternative energy companies with access to leading sources of capital.

Through our multi-disciplinary representation of project developers, power producers, lenders, investors and large energy users on alternative energy projects and related transactional and regulatory issues, we have a broad and deep range of legal experience relevant to the clean technology and alternative energy sector.
