

"BREXIT BITES": DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Date: 27 May 2016

By: John D. Magnin, Sean Kelsey

This is the ninth in our series of "Brexit Bites" which focuses on Dispute Resolution.

If the UK exits the EU, there could be implications for any dispute resolution process involving English law and English courts. Much will depend on the terms of the UK's exit. Naturally, there has been considerable focus on how judgments of English courts will be enforced by their EU counterparts, and vice versa. We provide below a top level summary of the critical issues which will be followed up next week with a more detailed analysis.
