OVERVIEW

Scott McJannet's practice includes public finance and municipal law, chiefly focused on bond counsel and underwriter's counsel work.

He has experience in structuring and executing a variety of public finance transactions, including general obligation bond issues, revenue and assessment bond issues, lease financings, and industrial development bonds. Scott has experience in a wide range of the firm's representations as bond counsel, underwriter's counsel, and borrower's counsel. He has experience in drafting election proceedings, advising on federal tax questions, analyzing statutory and regulatory issues, drafting legislation, managing Freedom of Information Act requests and public disclosure laws, analysis of Blue Sky securities laws, and drafting opinions of counsel.

Scott has worked with a wide variety of the firm's municipal clients in Washington, Alaska, Montana, Idaho, California, and Florida; including cities, counties, boroughs, school districts, port districts, public utility districts, and other special districts.

Scott also practices in the area of education law, as well as corporate and litigation work. With the education practice group, Scott works with a variety of school districts, special purpose districts, and municipal clients on public policy issues. He has experience in drafting legislation, interlocal agreements, and local ordinances.
