OVERVIEW

Nóirín McFadden is a consultant in the firm's London office. She concentrates her practice on data protection, technology and commercial matters.

Nóirín advises on wide-ranging data protection issues, including EU and UK GDPR compliance requirements, website compliance including the management of cookies, employees' personal data, international data transfers, and data processing projects for a variety of organisations, including global corporates, UK and European companies and charities. Nóirín has particular experience on advising on data subject requests and complaints, particularly in complex dispute situations such as in the context of employment grievances.

Nóirín also has experience in data and trade mark licensing and in distribution agreements and has worked on a range of technology and commercial matters including software licensing, and consumer regulatory compliance and online contracting for eCommerce businesses.

PROFESSIONAL BACKGROUND

Prior to joining the firm Nóirín worked in-house at a leading financial index provider. Before that, she trained at a national firm where she qualified in September 2009.

Nóirín is an IAPP-certified privacy practitioner as a Certified Information Privacy Professional/Europe (CIPP/E) and regularly writes about, and presents at events on privacy and commercial matters
